THE ARTS ARE BACK
MUSIC OF THE NIGHT

WHILE SOME PERFORMING arts venues are beginning to reopen, many remain dark due to the pandemic, leaving music lovers pining for the thrill of a live concert. THIRTEEN is here to help with concert premieres from Great Performances and Great Performances at The Met, filmed at breathtaking locations around the world.

Great Performances: Mick Fleetwood & Friends (Thu 10th, 9:30 p.m.) celebrates the musical legacy of Peter Green, a founding member of the rock super group Fleetwood Mac. In February 2020, Mick Fleetwood organized an all-star tribute at the London Palladium featuring Christine McVie, Pete Townshend, Steven Tyler, Bill Wyman, and other rock and roll luminaries.

Married tenor and soprano duo Roberto Alagna and Aleksandra Kurzak perform arias and duets from the Château de la Chèvre d’Or in the South of France in Great Performances at the Met: Aleksandra Kurzak & Roberto Alagna in Concert (Sun 13th, 12 p.m.). Highlights include the love duet from Madama Butterfly, “Caro elisir” from L’Elisir d’Amore, and the Mexican favorite “Cielito Lindo.”

Recorded in February 2021 from the Spanish Riding School in Vienna, Austria, Great Performances at the Met: Anna Netrebko in Concert (Fri 18th, 9 p.m.) features the megastar soprano performing Russian songs by Rachmaninoff, Rimsky-Korsakov, and Tchaikovsky, as well as selections by Debussy, Dvořák, Fauré, and Strauss. Mezzo-soprano Elena Maximova joins Netrebko for duets from Offenbach’s “Les Contes d’Hoffmann” and Tchaikovsky’s “The Queen of Spades.”

Italian tenor Andrea Bocelli returns to Great Performances with Andrea Bocelli: Believe (Thu 24th, 8 p.m.), inspired by his 2020 album Believe and following in the spirit of his record-breaking “Music for Hope” Easter performance from Milan’s Duomo cathedral in the dark early days of the pandemic. Recorded on spectacular locations on the island of Malta, it features selections from Believe, including “Gratia Plena,” a previously unreleased film song by Italian composer Ennio Morricone, a duet with Cecilia Bartoli, and new interpretations of “Ave Maria” and Leonard Cohen’s “Hallelujah.”

The Vienna Philharmonic’s annual summer concert at the magnificent gardens of Vienna’s Imperial Schönbrunn Palace was delayed last year until September due to the COVID-19 performance shutdown. Enjoy a front-row seat to Vienna Philharmonic Summer Night Concert 2020 (Fri 25th, 9 p.m.), courtesy of Great Performances. Superstar tenor Jonas Kaufmann joins guest conductor Valery Gergiev for works from the concert stage, ballet, opera, and film to celebrate the concert’s theme of “Love.”

Great Performances programs will stream following each broadcast via the series website (pbs.org/gperf) and the THIRTEEN app (thirteen.org/anywhere).

In the meantime, enjoy a variety of recent #PBSForTheArts premieres that are now available to stream, including Great Performances: The Arts Interrupted, a documentary special featuring the survival stories of arts organizations across America; Inside the Met, a behind-the-scenes look at the Metropolitan Museum of Art’s struggle to survive amid the pandemic; and Great Performances: Uncle Vanya, an Olivier Award-nominated West End production of Anton Chekhov’s masterpiece adapted by Conor McPherson, and starring Toby Jones and Richard Armitage from London’s Harold Pinter Theater.

Lights... Camera... Arts!

ARTS!

IN THE BELOVED BACKSTAGE musical 42nd Street, ingenue Peggy Sawyer saves a Broadway show from closing when the show’s leading lady breaks her ankle. Peggy learns the role in 36 hours, goes out a youngster, and comes back a STAR. While this scenario may seem outlandish, it perfectly embodies the ultimate theatrical mantra “The show must go on!”

We’re seeing many shining examples of this centuries-old theatrical credo across all genres in the arts world during the pandemic—from theater and opera companies that have been providing audiences with a steady line-up of streaming productions since their stages went dark, to museums that are bringing their exhibits outdoors, to singers and musicians whose street performances and virtual concerts provided hope and healing during the darkest days of the pandemic.

#PBSForTheArts, a multiplatform campaign from PBS and The WNET Group, celebrates the resiliency of the arts in America during the COVID-19 pandemic shutdown and reopening, featuring new performing arts content filmed within the constraints of the pandemic. The variety of programming across broadcast and digital platforms showcases the devastating impact of the pandemic to the arts industry and looks at the ways arts organizations have adapted and evolved to meet the moment.

The collection of #PBSForTheArts content will air on THIRTEEN and stream on pbs.org/arts and the PBS Video app (pbs.org/app). Curated conversation and digital shorts will be available on PBS social media platforms using #PBSForTheArts. Look for new specials and original digital content from Great Performances, American Masters, PBS NewsHour’s Beyond the Canvas series, the PBS Digital Studios series Sound Field, and The WNET Group in the coming months.

In the meantime, enjoy a variety of recent #PBSForTheArts premieres that are now available to stream, including Great Performances: The Arts Interrupted, a documentary special featuring the survival stories of arts organizations across America; Inside the Met, a behind-the-scenes look at the Metropolitan Museum of Art’s struggle to survive amid the pandemic; and Great Performances: Uncle Vanya, an Olivier Award-nominated West End production of Anton Chekhov’s masterpiece adapted by Conor McPherson, and starring Toby Jones and Richard Armitage from London’s Harold Pinter Theater.

Exclusive #PBSForTheArts blogs, published on pbs.org/arts, will also spotlight the inspiring pandemic survival stories of artists across the country. From Broadway dancers and concert performers to classical musicians, visual artists, and beyond, audiences will discover how these creative, resourceful artists have kept the arts vivid and vital during the pandemic. Interviews include Chelsey Hill, a Metropolitan Opera dresser and illustrator; and Donald Lee, a member of the inclusive dance company Heidi Latsky Dance.

Major funding for Great Performances is provided by The Joseph and Robert Cornell Memorial Foundation, the Anna-Maria and Stephen Kellen Arts Fund, Rosalind P. Walter, the LuEsther T. Mertz Charitable Trust, the Seton Melvin Charitable Trust, the Kate W. Cassidy Foundation, Jody and John Arnhold, The Starr Foundation, The Philip and Janice Levin Foundation, the Thea Petschek Iervolino Foundation, Lorraine A. Egan and the late Richard T. Egan, the Estate of Worthington Mayo-Smith, Ellen and James S. Marcus, public television viewers and PBS.

Corporate support for Great Performances at the Met is provided by Toll Brothers, America’s luxury home builder. Funding for Aleksandra Kurzak & Roberto Alagna in Concert and Anna Netrebko in Concert is provided by Jan Shrem and Maria Manetti Shrem.
PIROUETTE POWER

American Masters: Ballerina Boys
Fri 4th, 9 p.m.

FOR NEARLY 50 YEARS, Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo—the internationally acclaimed, all-male comic ballet company—has delighted critics and audiences alike with their witty, flamboyant send-ups of Swan Lake and other ballet classics. Before every performance, these talented male ballerinas heap on makeup, don tutus, and emerge from the wings to perform the great female roles of classical ballet—in pointe shoes.

As culture wars ignite over gender fluidity and LGBTQ rights, the story of the Trocks—as they are affectionately known in the ballet world—cannot be more relevant. The Company’s superb artistry and irreverent ballet technique have won over ballerinas and critics alike, and earned them a passionate cult following.

“Being in a company like the Trocks where you can freely be Black and gay and a dancer on stage is a great thing for young people to see. I’m fortunate to show them this is possible,” says Gosa, whose signature role is the uproarious “Dying Swan” solo.

We also meet Albie Pretto, who was frustrated by the limitations of conventional male ballet roles. “At the traditional ballet companies, men end up dancing behind the girls, just partnering them. I felt that wasn’t enough for me,” he explains. “There is something really empowering about performing in drag.”

Kevin Garcia was 12 years old when he first discovered the Trocks. “It was like seeing heaven open up,” he says.

American Masters: Ballerina Boys will stream following the broadcast on pbs.org/americanmasters and the THIRTEEN app (thirteen.org/anywhere).

Fiscal sponsorship of American Masters: Ballerina Boys is provided by Filmmakers Collaborative, with investment support provided by John Barylick. Major funding of the original episode American Masters: Ballerina Boys was provided by Jody and John Arnhold, Emily Coward and Raphael Ginsberg, and the Jerome Robbins Foundation.

THE SCHOOL YEAR has officially ended, but learning takes center stage all summer long at THIRTEEN, thanks to Camp TV, public media’s series for kids ages 5-10 that brings the magic, learning, and fun of the day camp experience to your living room! Season 2 premieres on July 6—more information to come in next month’s program guide—but happy campers can catch up on Season 1 now and enjoy the brand new season at camptv.org.

The summer adventure series debuted last summer in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, which shut down summer camps across the country. Providing fun activities and learning adventures for kids missing out on the summer camp experience, Camp TV is hosted by a head counselor played by exuberant Broadway performer Zachary Noah Piser (Dear Evan Hansen, Wicked), who guides campers as they learn through play.

Head counselor Zach kicks off each episode with a welcome song and announces the day’s theme, which in Season 2 will include Summer Celebration Day, Snow Day, Patterns Day, Inside Out Day, Independence Day, Celebrate Your Name Day, Sports Day, Royalty Day, Travel Day, Mismatched Shoe Day, Favorite Animal Day, Ocean Day, and more. Zach guides campers through a variety of activities, exploring nature, math, science, the arts, movement, storytelling, writing, and more. Each episode includes special appearances by artists and teachers from leading cultural and educational institutions across the New York metropolitan area and beyond, as well as a storytelling segment featuring a different book of the day. The series will also spotlight content from PBS stations across the country.

The New York Times “Kids” column praised the series debut last summer, calling it a refreshing, much-needed “cultural fix” as many arts institutions remained closed. “This television series has not only public broadcasting’s bona fides, but also a mission to help prepare campers ages 5-10 for school,” the column noted.

Common Sense Media gave Camp TV a rave review and an A+ in the “Educational Value” category, noting, “This series offers unique learning opportunities from presenters with different kinds of teaching styles and subject matter. Kids (and even some parents) will learn a lot from this well-rounded series.”

“Camp TV and our other popular instructional learning series Let’s Learn NYC! are absolutely core to our mission,” says Sandra Sheppard, Director and Executive Producer, Kids’ and Media Education at The WNET Group. “We recognize that there are many kids who may not have access to the Internet, day camps, or adequate technology. As a public media provider, we know that our most important mission is to fill that gap and reach children and their families with dynamic educational content.”

Camp TV was created to fill a very specific gap, according to Sheppard. “Unfortunately, there’s a significant learning slide during the summer, and there are lots of kids who don’t go to day camp. It’s an economic and equity issue,” she explains. “We responded with significant partnerships—from Carnegie Hall and The New Victory Theater to Liberty Science Center, the zoos, museums, and libraries—to provide broadcast content that is free to all and reaches 99% of the public.

Partnerships for the new season of Camp TV extend well across the country, including San Diego Zoo Wildlife Alliance, South Dakota Children’s Museum, the Exploratorium, and the Utah-based One Voice Children’s Choir. Sheppard and her team see a bright future for the series beyond the pandemic.

An enthusiastic summer camper throughout her formative years, Melinda Toporoff, writer and producer of Camp TV, knows what the magic of organized summer activities feels like and what it means to be a happy camper.

“Camp TV strives to capture the joy a summer camp experience can bring,” she says. “By guiding viewers through new activities and skills and exposing them to wow factor content, Camp TV is a happy campers informal education at its best.”

Nature: The Bat Man of Mexico
Wed 30th, 8 p.m. • pbs.org/nature

Since ecologist Rodrigo Medellin first kept bats in his bathroom as a child, he has dedicated his life to saving them. Now Mexico’s most famous export, tequila, is at stake. Medellin’s beloved Lesser long-nosed bat is crucial to the most famous export, tequila, is at stake. Medellin’s beloved Lesser long-nosed bat is crucial to the industry for poisioning her and her family in Vietnam. To save these bats from extinction, Medellin must track the bats’ epic migration across Mexico, braving hurricanes, snakes, and seas of roaches. David Attenborough narrates.
